Learning about Thanksgiving

Feasting like the Pilgrims

Sierra Vista School fifth graders in Upland reenacted their own version of the Thanksgiving feast in order to gain a better understanding of history.

Students celebrated the holiday a week early this year. The children in Dina Olsen's and Roger Kincaid's classes spent weeks studying the Pilgrims and their plight before recreating the traditional Thanksgiving feast.

"This is the first time we've done anything like this. This feast is in conjunction with the students' history series about the Pilgrims," Mrs. Olsen said.

Principal Richard Riley suggested trying something different with the history series, so the two teachers began working on the project in September.

Students began learning to cook some of the familiar Pilgrim dishes three weeks ago. The youngsters designed their own costumes, many of them quite detailed, Mrs. Olsen.

During their studies, the group visited the Pilgrim Place in Claremont, a retirement center for Christian missionaries and their families. Center residents portrayed Pilgrims in a play for the children.

Margaret Harter and Belle Bogard, from Pilgrim Place, also visited the children during their classroom feast. The women even dressed for the occasion — complete with white bonnets, capes and aprons.

Other honored guests included Riley, Upland School District Superintendent George Renworth and the Rev. Charles Bennison, St. Mark's Episcopal Church.

"We spent two weeks in class learning why the settlers came here and the many hardships they were faced with once here," Mrs. Olsen said. "I tried to teach the children that, although the Pilgrims came to this country for religious freedom, they also came to better themselves economically."

After weeks of preparation, the fun began when the students put on their costumes and sat down to dinner.

Room 17 didn't look much like Plymouth, Mass. — but the enthusiasm was there.

The traditional turkey dinner was served, but students used instant stuffing mix and frozen pumpkin pie to make the meal easier to prepare.

The next major period of history students will study is the Civil War era. "We're going to try and find out what prejudice is by role playing. The students will portray the haves and the have-nots," Mrs. Olsen said.

She said she is trying to show her students that the life they know today is based upon the people who have lived before them. □

City clerk is storehouse of information

Dee Carpenter has been Upland's City Clerk for 16 1/2 years.

By Terri Tirella

Dee Carpenter is one of Upland's best resources.

She's the lady you can ask just about anything, and if she doesn't know the answer — which is not often — she can tell you who will.

Carpenter said she has picked up odd pieces of information over her 16 1/2 years of city service.

"It's typical for city clerks to stay around," she said. "Every city or town has one, so people come to the city clerk to ask questions not particularly pertaining to this office."

Carpenter said she gets frequent requests from people seeking legal advice. "They'll ask about do-it-yourself divorces and then will go into great detail about the problem," she said.

Carpenter is easily recognized by a bee pin she often wears on her shoulder. "It was a gift from my mother," she said.

Her office credenza also sports a few of the bees she's received as gifts. "My daughter is great at finding them."

People who have difficulties with their neighbors sometimes ask city hall to intercede on their behalf. They're usually referred to the city clerk's office.

"They want the city to take care of the problems like a tree that hangs over a (shared) fence, or neighbors don't like the trash (surrounding the house) or barking or loose dogs," Carpenter explained.

She said she's had people on their way abroad stop by the office to pick up proof of citizenship, sometimes minutes before they are to board their planes.

"We don't have that information. They have to get that at county offices," she noted.

Before being elected city clerk, Carpenter was office manager for the Upland News.

She said she enjoyed working in the newspaper office. "I got interested in city affairs through the paper," she said.

When the incumbent city clerk decided not to run, Carpenter did. "There were others running," she said. "I didn't campaign and I didn't think I'd win. My bosses didn't either."

But Carpenter has won four elections. She doubts that she'll run for another term. "I don't really enjoy campaigning and the speeches, it's not easy."

She and her husband, Frank, an Upland city councilman, have a daughter and a granddaughter.

When Carpenter became city clerk, her husband was a member of the city's planning commission. "We decided a long time ago we would try not to talk about city things," she said.

"It was frustrating at first," she said. "He'd ask what happened at work and I'd say 'oh, nothing.' Then he'd read about it in the paper."

Students participated in an afternoon chess workshop recently as part of the school's PTA cultural program. The PTA also has sponsored a creative writing workshop earlier in the year.

Alice Naugle taught the children, grades one through six, about the various pieces on a chess board.

"Remember that a rook looks like a castle and the crown represents the queen. Remember that the sharp points on the crown resemble her fingernails," Mrs. Naugle said. "And this is the king. If the king is lost the game is lost."

She explained the basic strategy of the game, while each of the 54 children moved the chess pieces on their boards.

"When a player says check that means the other player's king is in danger," she said. "When he says checkmate, the game is over."

Mrs. Naugle said chess is an ideal game for children of all ages, especially today.

"Chess is a game of strategy. Any child that can play those Atari video games like they do can play chess. I'm hoping that the children will work on their game at home and want to learn more about it on their own," she said.

The Upland Public Library has several books about children's chess which contain pictures and easy explanations about the game, she said.

Mrs. Naugle was surprised at the children's response to the workshop. "I expected to have about five children."

Teacher turns Wildcat band around

By Josie Garza

A menagerie of sounds emanates from Sandy Plourde's classroom.

At the start of the school year, some people might wonder what to call the sounds, but by the end of the year the word "music" comes to mind.

Plourde, 46, started teaching six years ago at Etiwanda Intermediate School in what she calls the beginning of the second half of her life.

The attractive blonde and hazel-eyed woman saw a challenge when she first walked into the Etiwanda Wildcat Band room located in a converted kindergarten classroom.

"Wildcat" apparently was a fitting term for the few band members at the time had become accustomed to sitting in the classroom where they so desired and playing their instruments at performances when they felt like it, Plourde said.

That situation changed when Plourde took over the band.

At first, Plourde said she was a bit startled when she saw how the band members had gotten used to doing what they wanted.

Furthermore, the advanced musicians couldn't play their instruments, she said.

"The first thing I did when I came was make a lot of rules and set down discipline," remembered Plourde.

"I told them, 'if you make a commitment to your music you had to be responsible for (your) part and how to play it in a performance,'" Plourde said.

"You have to play in a performance. When a band rehearses the members get used to every person. Every part is a part of the whole."

Plourde said her job's a little easier today since the fifth-to-eighth grade youngsters in the band have learned by word-of-mouth what to expect in the class and of her.

After establishing discipline in the classroom, Plourde set out to find ways to make the intermediate school band "fun." She ordered windbreakers bearing the "Etiwanda Wildcats Band" emblem in the school

Music teacher Sandy Plourde conducts young musicians in the Etiwanda Intermediate School Wildcat Band. Since her arrival at the school, Plourde has expanded the music program to include colors of green and white and asked that the students wear white pants, blouses and or shirts as uniforms.

The band started playing at Dodger games and competitive school band festivals, sponsored by the Southern California School Band and Orchestra Association, at Cal State San Bernardino and Fontana High School.

Her band leadership led to an increase in the number of students in her classes.

When she arrived at the school, Plourde had 20 in her fifth grade class, 13 students in her sixth grade music class and 21 in her combined seventh and eighth grade band class. Today, she has 35-37 students in her fifth grade class, 30 in her sixth and 43 in her seventh and eighth grade class.

Plourde's efforts also culminated in superior rankings at two consecutive annual school band festivals.

"These kids work hard. If they didn't work at it, we wouldn't be able to do so well at the festivals," Plourde said.

Plourde said she thinks she entered the teaching profession at the right time.

After spending more than 10 years as a homemaker, Plourde started itching to do something else in addition to being a mother and wife.

"I was bored to death. I got up every morning and wondering what I was going to do. I just hated it. I thought I could be learning something in school," said Plourde.

She went back to college in 1973 and started taking a variety of classes. Plourde decided to major in music at Cal State San Bernardino. Upon completion of her bachelor's degree, Plourde entered the teaching education department and eventually earned her master's degree.

"I think I'm a little different teacher than I would be if I would have started at 22. Well, I think at 22 you're a little more idealistic in the ways you think kids should be. Instead, I went into teaching with a realistic attitude how kids are," explained Plourde.

That understanding of attending school band festivals and more public performances. She also introduced a band uniform made up of a green windbreaker jacket and white pants or skirts.

children has paid off in the classroom, she said.

To help herself become a better teacher and a more accomplished musician, Plourde is a member of the San Bernardino Community Concert Band that meets at Cal State.

The teacher said she joined the group three years ago so she could improve her playing of the clarinet, an instrument she has to teach some of her students. Plourde played percussion when she majored in music at the university.

"One night a week, I'm the student. I've learned a lot by doing that," said Plourde.

During Easter vacation, the community group will be going on tour in Hawaii. The University of Hawaii is among the places the adult band will be performing.

Program teaches how to avoid danger

By Josie Garza

Teaching children to find ways out of potentially harmful situations is the goal of a new child abuse prevention program coming to Central School District.

Children will be taught three rules of thumb, integral parts of the state-funded program:

- ✓ Say "No."
- ✓ Get away.
- ✓ Tell someone.

Central School District trustees approved the introduction of the program coordinated locally by Mary Rios, child abuse prevention specialist with Chino Youth Services, at their last meeting.

For children in grades kindergarten to sixth the program includes the presentation of the film "Better Safe Than Sorry," narrated by TV personality Stephanie Edwards.

Featured in the film is a group of elementary school youngsters discussing child abuse and acting out three scenarios depicting potential child abuse situations.

In one vignette, two girls are approached by stranger supposedly looking for a lost puppy. He asks the girls to go with him to help look for it. The girls think twice about it and tell the man that they hope he finds his dog but that they can't help him. When the stranger approaches them, they rush home.

Another vignette shows a young girl invited into the home of a neighbor. She appears to think twice about going into the house but follows the neighbor anyway. The neighbor picks the girl up, sits her on the kitchen counter and begins to unbutton her blouse because he thinks it's too hot for her.

Sensing that she's in a dangerous situation, the little girl yells "No" to the man, jumps off the counter and runs out of the house to tell someone.

The final vignette addresses abuse in the home. A person living with a child (it's not clear whether the person is a family member or a friend of the family) tells a boy as he is leaving the child's room not to tell anyone about what he did. He tells the youngster that if the child told someone he (the adult) could be sent to prison. The child appears confused because he is made to feel guilty by the person who lives with him. What should the boy do? Tell someone, stresses the movie.

"It's a hard issue to cover. There are no cartoons or cutesy things (in the movie)," explains Rios, a registered nurse who out of personal conviction started working in the field of teaching child abuse prevention.

Youths in seventh and eighth grades don't see the film but are included in the program. Children in the film are elementary school age. The child abuse prevention program emphasizes teaching children in grades kindergarten-eighth how-to think their way out of a potentially harmful situation.

Rios and volunteers working in the program strive to teach youngsters to use their brain to prevent possible child abuse or other harm.

The program stresses to children that "no one has the right to touch (or abuse) their body," said Rios.

After the screening of the movie, Rios and volunteers will visit kindergarten-sixth grade classes to reinforce the three rules of thumb mentioned above and stressed in the movie. When visiting seventh and eighth grade classes, Rios and volunteers approach the subject on a more mature level.

Children have to be taught that they have a right to say no and a right to prevent things from happening to them, Rios stressed.

Often, she said, children think they don't have any rights. Children are many times victims of crimes because they do not think that they can say no to an adult.

"If we don't teach our children how not to be the perfect victims, they will continue to be victimized," said Rios.

Rios is presently looking for people interested in participating in the child abuse prevention program as a classroom volunteer. Volunteers are trained on the principles of child abuse prevention so they can enter the classroom to teach or reinforce the concepts.

For more information, phone Mary Rios at 591-9822 or Deanna Bowers, Central School District nurse, at 980-3930.

Stepfamily meeting

"Dealing with your child's other parent," is the topic for the local chapter of the Stepfamily Association of America Monday from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

Judy Lee Rawls, who holds a Ph.D. in clinical psychology, will discuss dealing with the ex-spouse.

Rawls will not only draw from her clinical expertise in this area, but also her practical experience. She has experienced stepfamily living from the roles of step-daughter, remarried mother and stepmother with "his, hers and our" children in her present marriage.

The meeting will be held at Pomona First Federal Savings & Loan, 1933 Foothill Blvd., La Verne.

The local Stepfamily Association has members from throughout the West Valley.

For more information, call Betty at 625-2887, Shirley, 596-8272 or Kathy, 969-3247.

Children's parade

will be held Dec. 1.

The 1 p.m. parade will travel through the Upland Town Center, starting at the corner of Second Avenue and A Street and ending at the Kiosk at Second Avenue and Ninth Street.

This year's theme is "Children's Dreams at Christmas." Bands, floats, clowns, marching groups, costume characters and antique autos will be featured during the one-hour parade. Santa Claus will arrive on a fire truck and will greet children and give out candy at the Kiosk following the parade.

For more information, contact the Upland Chamber of Commerce at 886 W. Foothill Blvd., Suite F, or call 982-8816.

RC Neighborhood Center expansion completed

By Terri Tirella

A new addition to the Rancho Cucamonga Neighborhood Center will be dedicated with a special dinner early next month.

"The addition will be completed by Nov. 20, except for the pick-up items like getting rid of paint can covers, not anything actually effecting use," said Dick Mayer, park project coordinator.

The expansion project enlarged the 6,800-square-foot building, located at 9791 Arrow Highway, by an additional 3,600 square feet, plus an outside patio, Mayer said.

"We added another multipurpose room, more restrooms, a lounge area, primarily for seniors, and a parking lot," he said.

The kitchen facility at the site was remodeled with the installation of a new dishwasher, storage facilities and more "circulating" room. "It makes it easier for the (nutrition program) workers to get the job done."

With the expanded space, more meals will be able to be prepared for the mobile meals program, according to Kevin Evans, recreation supervisor.

The addition cost $414,794 and was financed partially by federal Community Development Block Grant funds, Mayer said.

The funding for the Neighborhood Center addition was made available because of its location in a low- to moderate-income area, and because it serves local senior citizens.

"We'll primarily use it for more activities for senior citizens in Rancho Cucamonga, through special classes and service programs," Evans said.

Current programs may be expanded. Other services include legal aid, food distribution center, a well-baby clinic and a food distribution center, and English as a Second Language which is held in conjunction with Chaffey District Adult Education.

The Rancho Cucamonga VIP senior citizen club currently holds meetings, as well as city co-sponsored events.

4-H council honors volunteers

The West End District 4-H Leaders Council honored its volunteers recently with a special dinner.

First-year leaders honored include Eleanor Herr, Cora Schmitt and Jean Schrickler from the Upland Foothill Farmers Club.

Cindy Dunlap was recognized for her leadership of the Cucamonga-Alta Loma Rancho Rebels Club.

Second-year leaders honored from the Upland Foothill Farmers group were Linda Brewer, Mike Colbus and Shirley Dupont while Jennifer Rager was the representative honored from the Rancho Rebels group.

Honored for three years of leadership was Sharon Kourtis, from the Cucamonga-Alta Loma Rancho Rebels. Sue Draper received recognition for eight years.

Group therapy group for widows begins

The Samaritan Center for Pastoral Counseling will begin a Women's Support Group, starting at 7 p.m. Nov. 26.

The sessions, to be held at the First Presbyterian Church, 869 N. Euclid Ave., Upland, will run for eight consecutive Mondays, breaking for Christmas.

The cost for the group therapy is $13.50 per meeting. People interested in registering for the group should call 985-0513. They also may attend the first meeting without advanced reservations.

The Samaritan Center is an agency of the Greater West End United Way.

BERKELEY — Many who accept divorce as a modern day fact of life and who look upon it as a short-term crisis had better think again, in view of the findings of a leading researcher on divorce and families at the University of California at Berkeley.

Says Judith Wallerstein, a surprising number of children who were well cared for before divorce suffer prolonged physical and emotional neglect after the divorce is final.

"In many instances," she has found, "parents' child rearing capacities have been chronically weakened or skewed by the breakdown of the marriage."

As a result, she says, "many children are overburdened by the Effect of divorce long-term need to fend for themselves or to be responsible for siblings or an emotionally distraught parent long after a family breakup."

Thus, she warns, counseling programs that focus entirely on the immediate crisis of divorce are missing some of the most needy and troubled families.

Wallerstein is executive director and founder of the Center for the Family in Transition in Corte Madera and senior lecturer in the Schools of Social Work and Law at UC Berkeley.

Her research, she says, has identified an emerging group of children who are overwhelmed by the radical changes in their families' circumstances during the post-divorce years:

- "Children forced by divorce to take inordinate responsibility for their own upbringing.

- "Children who become the main source of emotional support for a divorced parent or an entire family.

- "Those who remain the targets of continued dispute and litigation between their parents, even despite mediation efforts.

- "An increasing number who experience a second parental divorce and who cannot cope with the two disruptions."

Wallerstein has found, she says, that young children of divorce often come home to empty houses, make their own supper, put themselves to bed, get themselves up in the morning — or fail to do so. Many are shunted among multiple child care settings during each week, she adds.

Sometimes, she found, "older children are left inappropriately to provide total care for younger siblings, sometimes in life and death situations."

This adds up, she has found, to intense fears of abandonment and homelessness for these children. Older children in particular may feel a desperate need, she says, for protection against their own impulses and the dangers of the outside world.

Nevertheless, she adds, "the most troubled children of all may be those inextricably tangled in the lives of parents who do not recover fully from divorce. These children may be forced, in a desperate attempt to avoid rejection or to keep an emotionally ill parent functioning, into inappropriate psychological roles — as arbiter, protector, adviser, confidante, lover or therapist."

Today's father has lost traditional position as head of his household

By The Rev. Lee Truman
Copley News Service

Father's will is under attack. As never before, Dad needs to understand the pressures that are on him if he is helping to raise a modern family.

Mothers are becoming liberated and children are rebelling against authority, and Dad's job keeps him away from the home at least eight hours a day, and many more hours if he drives to the inner city.

What kind of man makes a good father? That is a question that no one asks. It once was that a man married, he worked hard and he got his promotions. The children came, and he was the breadwinner and undisputed head of the family. If he wanted some help he either talked to the pastor if he was a churchgoer, or checked with his cronies at the poker club or pub if he wasn't.

Man no longer is king of his castle; there is a court revolution going on. Father has been dethroned to the position of court jester, according to most American humor.

Dr. Egbert writes that the "eroding of the power and glory of the American father" began during the depths of the Depression when the father was no longer the major or certain breadwinner. The doctor sees the embattled father now struggling to maintain his self-esteem in the face of an aggressive wife/mother and powerful adolescent peer group.

Television is no help to the father because of programming in which women and children consistently outwit the father.

Advertisers seek the dollars that Mother is spending, not Father. Certainly Dad is no longer as powerful as he once was. Part of the cause is that he is no longer available. Dad has to be out of the home to earn a living, and if he is to achieve a better living for his family, he may be absent 12 or more hours each day.

A second factor beyond the half-absent father is the wholly absent father. An increasing number of children live in a single-parent home. In ghetto areas more than 85 percent of the homes have no live-in father. This is all changing the effect that fatherhood has on children.

In the studies on delinquency and crime, it is found that the presence of a father is vital to the mental health of youngsters.

Mission San Juan Capistrano, just a hour or so away from the West Valley, provides a restful and interesting place to spend an afternoon.

On the Mission Trail: a trip into the past

Children exploded from the buses in a riot of noise and color, turning the peaceful plaza into a cheerful kaleidoscope as they dashed about. Some headed to the old, restored Palace Hotel, others to the false-fronted shops on the east side of the square.

A few wandered into the cool shade of the arched arcade and the San Juan Bautista mission museum; others discovered the ancient cemetery next to the mission itself and began to read the names and dates on the tombstones.

For a few moments it was bedlam. Then, gradually, the teachers and proctors gathered small groups around them and began to tell the story of the missions and their place in California history.

The children were sixth-graders from Fremont, and this field trip was part of their social studies class — a lively and vivid part — and one they will probably remember long after they have forgotten the dates and even some of the names.

But some of the names will linger. Many of them have been absorbed into California life: San Diego, Santa Barbara, Ventura, Carmel, San Francisco — cities and towns now — but mission sites in the beginning.

For the missions were the first settlements by whites in the state as we know it today. And their origins go back to Mexico, where, in 1769, a small, determined Franciscan friar on a donkey set out to build a whole new world.

Junipero Serra, born in Mallorca, Spain, in 1716, had already established himself as a brilliant teacher, devout priest and able administrator when he was handed the challenge to establish missions in Alta California, then controlled by Spain.

To protect him on his journey, he was accompanied by a handful of Spanish soldiers and a few stout hearts who were destined to help colonize the unknown area.

The story of their success is the early history of California. Facing almost unbelievable hardships, lacking food and supplies and hopelessly ignorant of the land to the north, they set out. Originally they planned to establish posts at major sites: San Diego, Monterey and San Francisco and to fill in the areas in between with missions no more than a good day's journey apart.

They were totally unprepared for the desolation of the area. Nor did they consider what would happen when the ships they counted on to bring them supplies broke down. Many starved to death. Then frequent arguments arose over authority — who was really in command, church or military? Endless bureaucratic red tape often hampered all their movements.

But, at the time of his death in 1784, Junipero Serra and his associates had firmly established nine missions and developed the format for 12 more.

These missions, covering a span of more than 650 miles, were not just churches in the desert, but small villages,

Life in C Zone: peak performance under pressure

You've heard of type A, the harried, impatient, driven taskmaster and high heart attack risk.

You've heard of type B, the non-competitive, low-key individual who's so laid-back that he's known to be found in the embalming profession.

Now, for the '80s, enters type C, the superachieving man or woman who can sustain high levels of peak performance for long periods without debilitating levels of stress.

This addition to the personality types first coined in 1958 by San Francisco cardiologists Ray Rosenman and Meyer Friedman is the brainchild of Bay area psychologists Robert and Marilyn Kriegel, authors of the new book "The C Zone: Peak Performance Under Pressure," published in September by Doubleday and Co.

Robert Kriegel, a sports psychologist, founder of the Esalen Sports Center and co-author of the book "Inner Skiing," has studied high performance for the last 20 years, concerned with the increasing demands that technology is placing on people.

According to Kriegel, "The typical manager of the '80s will have to learn, process and understand 20 times more information as that same person a decade ago."

Along the way, he discovered, "There are certain people who thrive under pressure, do their best work, don't burn out from stress and are, in fact, healthier than both type A and B."

These are people who love their work, consistently take on greater challenges, hate to fail but aren't afraid to, and know how to control fear and stress. They also know how to relax.

"They are people who are in love with life, who are enthusiastic and joyous about their work and their play and are really living life to the fullest," Kriegel said.

And, according to Kriegel, "here's the really important news: Everybody has performed as a type C at different points in their lives."

"We've all had those experiences where everything

There are certain people who thrive under pressure, do their best work, don't burn out from stress and are, in fact, healthier than both type A and B."

Robert Kriegel

Author of a book on Type C personalities

just starts to work for us. We get on a roll, we get more productive, we're not straining to get more done, and it feels easier to get it done. We feel more vital, we have a natural sense of confidence and we're not worried about results because we know everything is working. It's what we call in the culture being in the groove."

The trouble, Kriegel said, is that "most of us get into the C zone by accident. All of a sudden, things just start working, and we don't know why or how. And just as suddenly, it goes away. The difference is that peak performers know how to get themselves into the C zone."

"We can all learn that, as well. We're all type C's when we're born. What we need to learn is to overcome the obstacles, bad habits, fears, doubts and stresses that keep us out of the C zone."

The trick to staying in the C zone, Kriegel said in a recent interview, is achieving a balance between the qualities of "challenge" and "mastery." Most people tend to lean toward one direction or the other.

Is your work your life? Do you feel as though you are always rushing? Do you set your goals higher than you can reach? Do you enjoy taking risks?

If so, you are the challenge personality who loves to take risks and explore the unknown.

Do you play it safe? Are you cautious in your acceptance of new ideas? Do you always complete what you're doing before moving on to the next task? Do you get a sense of satisfaction from a job well done?

If so, you are the mastery personality who likes to refine skills and put everything together.

Challenge personalities tend to lose their grasp on the C zone by not taking the time to master each step of their own learning process. They need to slow down, integrate their achievements and organize their knowledge. Instead, they tend to keep on pushing until they end up burning out in what Kriegel calls "the panic zone."

Mastery personalities are the opposite. Detail oriented and careful, they tend to end up in what Kriegel calls "the drone zone," that comfortable area where life is easy and safe, but there's no challenge. In this zone, "after awhile you lose enthusiasm, you lose interest, you get lethargic, you don't care anymore."

According to Kriegel, many of the people who say they hate their jobs end up in the drone zone because they have become unwilling to take the risks necessary to get themselves excited again.

If you are in this situation, he said, the thing to do is not to leave your job. Instead, find out what's not working — not with the job, but with you. Remember why you took that particular job and take steps to get more of it.

In his research, Kriegel said, "one of the things managers talked about is how corporations reward mastery to such an extent that people end up not rocking the boat, not taking any risks, trying hard not to make mistakes. They end up with the philosophy of not losing rather than winning. They get so safe that there's no excitement or energy or enthusiasm. And there's no growth in that."

To break out of the drone zone, push yourself gradually into more activity. "Make sure the first step is a small one, and one you can do, one that's a little safe and a little risky but is leading you where you want to go," Kriegel said. "If you take too big a risk, you end up panicking and back in the drone zone."

Kriegel offers the following tips for staying in the C zone:

- Do a reality check when you become afraid of tackling a challenging project. Instead of allowing your mind to speculate endlessly on the failure certain to befall you, reflect on how well you have accomplished just this sort of task in the past.

HEEL SPUR SYNDROME

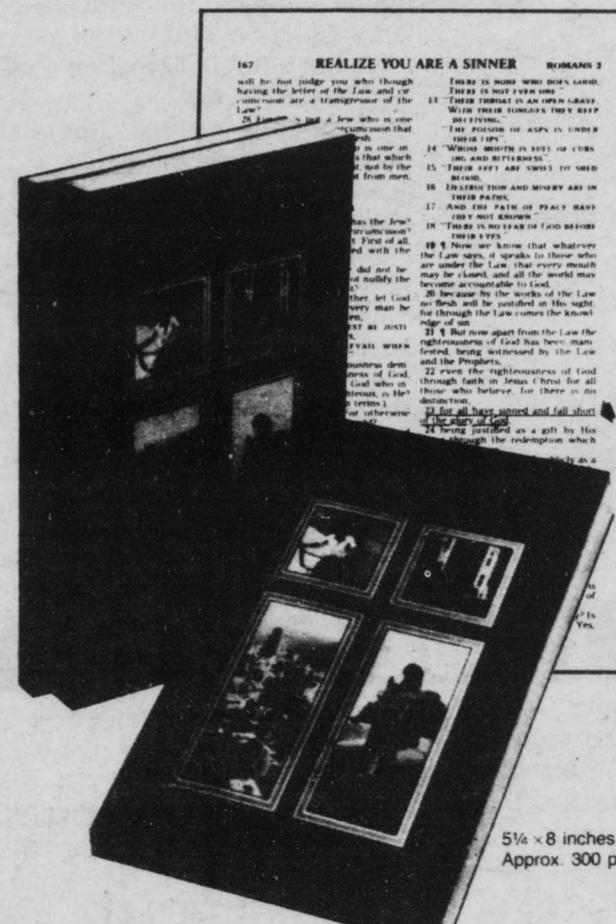

"Plantar Fasciitis", characterized by pain just under the heel bone, is a partial or complete tear in the arch ligament on the bottom of the foot. It is sometimes called a "heel spur". The pain can start immediately after a sudden tear or can develop gradually. There is usually slight swelling. The planter fascia, which is really a ligament, extends from the bottom of the heel bone to each of the five toes. It serves as an elastic guidewire to support the bottom of the foot, especially the arch. If sufficient pressure is exerted, the fascia tears. If attempts to cure the problem with heel pads are unsuccessful, a surgical cut into the ligament (a Steindler procedure) can often provide relief.

An orthotic device can prevent the arch ligament from straining.

STAMPS

By Lea Blauvelt
Copley News Service

The inventor Carl Richard Nyberg (1855-1939) was Sweden's first real aircraft builder. On Oct. 13 that country paid homage to him and Swedish aviation through the ages with a new miniature sheet.

In the center of the sheet, on a 2.70-krona stamp, is pictured Nyberg with his airplane Flugan (The Fly), a plane with a 10 horsepower steam engine. It could not stay aloft with such a weak engine — at best it was clear of the ground for a half meter or so.

"The Flying Baron," Carl Gustaf Cederstrom (1867-1918), was the first man in Sweden to get an international flying certificate. He got his flying training in France in 1910 and became a skilled pilot. Returning to Sweden he popularized flying through his aerial shows. He stands next to a a Bleriot L910 monoplane on a 1.90-krona value in the lower left corner of the sheet.

Above it to the left on another 1.90-krona stamp is depicted "The Flying Doctor," Enoch Thulin (1881-1919), who was both a pilot and an industrialist, as well as a doctor of philosophy. He mastered both the construction and the production of aircraft. During World War I some 100 planes and 700 engines were manufactured at the Thulin factory in Landskrona.

Shown on the stamps is a two-seater Thulin D (1915).

On the right side, lower corner, is a 190-krona stamp featuring the Junker plane Tomten (the Gnome) of Albin Ahrenberg (1889-1968), called the father of Swedish aviation by some. He did much in the '20s and '30s to bring flying to the general public. He also became a headline name after several dramatic flying expeditions.

The fifth stamp, in the upper right corner, also a 1.90 krona, shows a SAAB 90 Scandia from 1946. The plane succeeded the Douglas DC-3 in Swedish civil aviation. It has been called the "master of punctuality." It took 32 to 36 passengers and has a maximum speed of 450 km/h. A total of 18 SAAB 90 Scandias were built and all were eventually sold to Brazil.

Also issued that day by Sweden were stamps of 1.90 krona and 3.20 krona saluting the Viking Satellite project and Swedish aviation history, respectively. The lesser value used the Viking Satellite, while the higher used a motif from the Esrange base, a receiver station for information from satellites and a civilian rocket launching site.

AUSIPEX '84, Australia's first world philatelic exhibition, held Sept. 21-30, produced another spectacular miniature sheet picturing seven significant stamps, from "down under," all 30 cents in value.

Pictured on the sheet were the 3-pence Queen Victoria "half length" portrait of 1850 issued by Victoria, the 1850 1-pence "Seal of the Colony" stamp of New South Wales, the 1853 Van Diemen's Land (as Tasmania was known then) 1-pence Queen Victoria head issue, the 1-pence South Australia Victoria head of 1855, the famous 1-pence Black Swan of Western Australia (1854), The Queensland 6-pence Victoria full-face (the Chalon Head) of 1860 and Australia's well-known 1-pence Kangaroo and map stamp of 1913, its first Commonwealth issue.

The Solomon Islands also saluted AUSIPEX '84 by releasing a souvenir sheet and frequently stockaded, where Indian converts lived, tilled the land, developed their arts and crafts and learned Christianity — after a fashion.

Many historians find fault with the "benevolent despotism" of mission life. Some call it a shallow cover for outright slavery. Certainly it was a form of conquest. But the fact remains that the missions were the nucleus of Western civilization in California — the peaceful core on which future development took place.

El Camino Real, the King's Road, built by the missionaries to link one mission to the next, greatly expedited future north-south growth in California and has remained, with few deviations, in continuous use as Highway 101, ever since its founding. Today, bronze bells, on tall posts all along the way, mark its origin.

Travelers still find it one of the state's most scenic roads, and each year, hundreds of thousands of visitors make at least part of a pilgrimage to California's missions.

Several of the missions have been fully restored after years of decay following the 1833 laws of secularization which took them from the church. Many are today half-hidden in major metropolitan centers. Others are in regular use as parish churches and schools. A few have become state historical monuments, and only a handful retain more than a vague hint of the busy life centers they were originally.

All the missions are located in spectacularly beautiful settings and serve as rich landmarks for seeing much of the best of California from San Diego north to Sonoma.

Perhaps it is because of the fine locations that visiting them today readily includes more than just the historical or religious satisfactions inherent in such a journey. Over the years, many man-made attractions have been added to the natural beauties surrounding the original sites the founding padres found so ideal.

You might plan a trip to include two or three of the missions and surround your visit to them with such diversions as camping, beaching, birding, tidewater exploring, antique hunting or shopping or just enjoying a nearby town or wilderness area.

From the West Valley, for example, it's about an hour's drive to San Juan Capistrano, where you might stop to wander through the pretty town around the mission and head for the beach. Or toward San Luis Rey in San Diego County.

It takes about two hours to drive from the West Valley to Ventura, which has not only a working-parish-church mission, (San Buenaventura), a great archaeological dig, and a large and interesting district of antique shops, but also is home to the wonderful Channel Islands State Park.

Whichever way you plan, visiting the missions will give you and your family a very vital picture of what life was really like in early California, in some of the most magnificent places you will ever see anywhere.

GOOD NEWS
FOR AREA SMOKERS

(Advertisement)

Steve Zagorin, President of Begin, Inc., a highly successful smoking cessation, weight control and hypnosis center in Upland has announced his plans to extend operating hours in order to accommodate the large increase in persons wishing to quit smoking. Zagorin says that increased health risks and new laws concerning smoking in public places have made smokers acutely aware of the problems they face.

I don't totally agree with all the new laws being passed, says Zagorin. "As an ex-smoker I have a lot of empathy for those who have smoked for years and are suddenly told that they must change their life-style." Zagorin adds that his program is the perfect plan for those who really want to quit, for any number of reasons, and not for those who are forced to quit. "The only people who cannot be helped are those who don't want help", says Zagorin. Zagorin developed the "Smokers Last Chance" program in 1979 and its growth has been tremendous. He has directed the smoking cessation program for the Palm Springs Medical Center and has worked with local companies and executives. "We have helped hundreds of clients stop smoking and achieve their goals through teaching each client methodologies for controlling and utilizing their mind in a far more effective manner than ever before. This instructive program teaches you how to improve your self image, establish realistic and attainable goals, revise habit patterns and change attitudes, and build enthusiasm, zest and eagerness for better living.

STEVE ZAGORIN

Zagorin states that the primary concern at Begin, Inc. is to design an individual program suited to each client's needs. Our methods have virtually limitless possibilities in helping our clients achieve positive results in any area they desire.

All sessions are private and are conducted by either Zagorin or his associate Warren Hawkins.

Begin, Inc. is located at 1152 N. Mountain, Suite 206 in Upland. Additional information and appointments for a free consultation can be obtained by calling (714) 981-3096. Late evening and weekend appointments are available.

Copley News Service

So you're program chairman for the local coin club and have exhausted just about every idea for a program.

All the members have given talks on their specialties and you even had visiting Uncle Harry (who wouldn't know a numismatist from a philatelist) come to a meeting and tell what it's like living in Charlotte, N.C., which once had a Mint — from 1838 to 1861.

For the price of a slide projector — which surely the club can come up with via a coin raffle — you can have enough programs to last years.

How? Through the American Numismatic Association Library of slide programs on a variety of numismatic topics.

This visual education series both informs and entertains, making your newest neophyte member a hobby veteran in no time.

Concerned about counterfeits? Want to know how to spot them quickly? Three new ANA slide presentations are now available on counterfeit detection.

Set 53, "Counterfeit Detection: Gold Dollars and Quarter Eagles," shows the diagnostics of both genuine and fake specimens, developed from photographs in the American Numismatic Association Certification Service files.

Set 54 does the same for $3 gold pieces and half eagles while Set 55 will help you spot phony Eagles ($10 gold coins) and Double Eagles ($20 gold pieces).

And these are just the last three slide programs that complete the ANA series on counterfeits.

Set 62 is titled "A Tribute to Prominent Black Americans" and shows the medals produced by the Franklin Mint for the American Negro Commemorative Society. The men and women portrayed have made significant contributions to many aspects of society.

Perhaps you never have had a chance to visit ANA headquarters in Colorado Springs, Colo. You can at least do so vicariously with Set 63, "A Tour of the Remodeled ANA Headquarters," which takes the viewer on a 54-slide trip through the building and shows how ANA staff works for members and the hobby.

Another set is titled "Numismatic Fine Art Photography" and traces the art of coinage from ancient to modern times in a set of 60 slides showing the magnificence of coin designs.

Haven't got a program for next month's coin club? Sure you do. Write the ANA Visual Education Program for a complete list of programs available and information on how to borrow them at P.O. Box 2366, Colorado Springs, CO 80901.

New Zealand's latest coin is strictly for the birds. More specifically, for an endangered one — the black robins of Chatham Islands.

The Chatham Islands are a group of 10 islands just east of New Zealand's South Island. Formerly widespread in the islands, the black robin now is found on only two of the islands and fewer than two dozen exist.

Thanks to a cross-fostering program conducted by the New Zealand Wildlife Service, the number has increased to 20 now, but the bird remains on the endangered species list.

So New Zealand has chosen to commemorate the bird on the reverse of a new $1 coin, to be produced by the British Royal Mint.

four stamps, Sept. 21. The four stamps depicted four birds that frequent both Australia and the Solomon Islands and the sheet reproduced the four stamps, again. Thus linking the two countries both philatelically and ornithologically.

The Little Pied Cormorant (Phalacrocorax melanoleucos) was shown on the 12-cent value; the Australian grey duck (Anas superciliosa) on the 35 cent; the Nankeen night heron (Nycticorax caledonicus) on the 50 cent, and the Dollar Bird (Eurystomus orientalis solomonensis) on the $1 value.

And more AUSIPEX '84 — the Pitcairn Islands issued a two-stamp souvenir sheet featuring longboats, one of 50-cent value and one of $2, and Western Samoa issued a single-stamp sheet with a $2.50 value showing a Nomad N24 flying over the Western Samoan coastline. Both postal authorities released their sheets on Sept. 21.

The U.S. Postal Service has announced that an Alden Partridge stamp will be added to the regular "Great American" series next Feb. 12, the bicentennial of Partridge's birth. The value is as yet undetermined.

Known as the "Spiritual Father of the Reserve Officers Training Corps," Partridge founded the institution in 1819 as the American Literary, Scientific and Military Academy. It was chartered in 1834 as Norwich University in North Field, Vt.

Further announcements will be made here as information is received.

Thanksgiving is n

What's Thanksgiving Day all about? Some people may answer, "Turkey, cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes, corn and pumpkin pie." Not necessarily in that order. However, Rancho Cucamonga youngsters from various schools in the city know better.

Many elementary, intermediate and junior high school youngsters prepared for the holiday by participating in a variety of pre-Thanksgiving Day observances and learning the history of the holiday.

"Squanto's Surprise," a play written by Cindy Miller, adapted from a magazine story of the same name, was performed at Etiwanda Intermediate School, where Miller teaches.

The 15-minute play told of an early American Indian tribal encounter with some of the first white men to come to this country back in 1620.

It was a light-hearted play showing the Pilgrims, a group of religious Puritan separatists from the Church of England who left Plymouth, England, on the Mayflower ship in search of a place to live free of religious persecution.

En route to Virginia where Capt. John Smith from England made an earlier settlement, the Mayflower landed in Massachusetts. Instead of continuing on to Virginia, the Pilgrims decided to stay in the place they named Plymouth and establish their own government.

In "Squanto's Surprise," Squanto played by Adam Durham spoke with Gov. William Bradford played by Jerry Patton.

The two became friends and Squanto introduced the Pilgrims to popcorn, according to the play.

Costumes worn by the young fifth grade actors and actresses outfitted as Pilgrims and Indians were made by the parents of the youngsters.

At Jasper School, as at many elementary schools in the city, youngsters learned about the Indian tribes in Massachusetts and what life was like in the 1600s.

After learning the historical significance of the holiday, some youngsters at the school wrote essays on what they have to be thankful for or about the first Thanksgiving Day.

Kindergartners at Deer Canyon School put together a special Thanksgiving storybook.

At Alta Loma School, kindergartners made Pilgrim hats and second graders studied about the Massachusetts' Indians, Pilgrims and their voyage to Plymouth, Mass.

Summit School kindergartners gave their families a special treat Tuesday night when they presented a Thanksgiving musical program. The 76 youngsters played drums made of converted coffee cans as they sang such songs as "Pilgrim Children," "Five Little Indians in a Teepee," and "Indian Chief."

A friendship ceremony featuring a mock exchange of gifts between acting Indians and Pilgrims played by kindergartners at Dona Merced School was held this week. The youngsters also wore costumes as they sang a variety of seasonal songs.

Alta Loma Junior High School approached the holiday in a different manner. Youngsters there had an opportunity to send an official "turkey gram" to someone they know or would like to know at school.

The orange paper telegram with the depiction of a turkey on the front began, "Thank You for ..."

Inside the turkey gram, students were able to write a message. The price of the turkey gram (15 cents each or two for 25 cents) included the attachment of a balloon which carried the message, "Thank you for being you."

Funds raised from the sale of the turkey grams will go to the student body government. □

"How A Man Ages" tracks ravages of time

In a lively, thorough fashion, Curtis Pesman's book, "How A Man Ages," tracks the physical changes that accompany the passing decades of an average man. He looks at the common effects of Father Time's hand on the skin, hair, eyes, ears, heart, brain and mind and other organs. Following are brief summations of some of Pesman's findings:

● Skin: A man's skin becomes thinner and less elastic with age. Because of cartilage that begins accumulating after age 30, by the time he is 70 his nose has grown wider and longer, his earlobes have fattened and his ears themselves have grown a quarter-inch longer.

The lines on a middle-aged man's face are drawn from repeated facial expressions, but as he gets older, wrinkling happens automatically — the inside of the skin loses water and the skin itself thins and spreads out and gravity pulls it downward.

Age 30: Lines in forehead are present.

Age 40: Lines from facial expressions show up, especially crow's feet from squinting and arcs linking nostrils to the sides of the mouth, from smiling.

Age 50: Lines are more pronounced; skin begins to loosen and sag in the middle of the cheek.

Age 60: Excess skin and fat deposits etch bags under the eyes.

Age 70: Face wrinkles everywhere; skin is rougher and has lost its uniform color.

● Hair: Men bald at different rates, and some never do. Men with "male-pattern" baldness first notice a receding hairline, then hair loss on the "monk's spot." Eventually, the receding hairline meets the monk's spot and the scalp is bared.

According to "The AMA Book of Skin and Hair Care," over time, male-pattern baldness becomes noticeable in approximately 12 percent of men aged 25; 37 percent of men aged 35; 45 percent of men aged 45; 65 percent of men aged 65.

While there is great difference among men in the rate at which their hair falls out or turns gray, there seems to be a consistent pattern in the way individual hairs thin. A man's hairs are thickest at age 20 and shrink over time so that by age 70 his hairs are as fine as they were when he was a baby. On average, the diameter of a single hair goes from 101 microns at age 20 to 80 microns at age 70.

● Eyes: The lens steadily hardens through life and begins causing problems for a man in his early 40s. By then, the lens is too big for the eye muscles to focus properly on close objects. Eventually, this can cause cataracts, but odds are the man will die before that happens.

Aging causes the amount of light reaching the retina to decline, meaning the man will have trouble seeing in the dark and will need especially bright light to read:

Age 30: 20/20 vision, reads without glasses.

Age 50: 20/20 for distance vision, but needs glasses to read, a less elastic eye lens makes him sensitive to glare and his depth-perception is getting worse.

Age 60: 20/25 vision, a less elastic, yellowish lens filters out some shorter wavelengths of light making it harder for him to distinguish between blues and greens.

Age 70: 20/30 vision, peripheral vision is diminished, night vision is worse and his eyes take longer to adjust to the dark.

● Ears: In early adulthood, a man's hearing range begins to decrease in the high end.

However, hearing diminishes least in the range of human speech and the average old man can hear conversation reasonably well.

Age 30: He has trouble hearing above 15,000 hertz (a cricket's chirp).

Age 50: Can't hear above 12,000 hertz (a "silent" dog whistle).

Age 60: He can't hear above 10,000 hertz (upper range of a robin's song) and has trouble distinguishing among tones.

Age 70: He misses some words in normal conversation, can't hear above 6,000 hertz (high notes on a pipe organ).

● Heart: Heart disease has long been the most common cause of death in men over 40 and accounts for half the deaths of men over 60. The level of cholesterol in the blood increases with age and it tends to collect on artery walls, which are also thickening. This combines to impede the flow of blood, causing the heart to work harder to pump blood.

Recent studies indicate that changes in diet, lifestyle and exercise have a positive effect in reducing dangerous levels of cholesterol. The following figures show the average cardiovascular decline among men who have taken no special measures to correct cholesterol buildup:

Age 20: 180 milligrams cholesterol, 122/76 blood pressure.

Age 30: 200, 125/76.

Age 40: 220, 129/81.

Age 50: 230, 134/83.

Age 60: 230, 140/83.

Age 70: 225, 148/81.

● Brain: Over the years, a man's brain becomes smaller, and billions of neurons (which move messages along) are lost between adolescence and old age. Fortunately, man's brain contains as many as 100 billion neurons to offset the losses.

After about age 50, a slight loss of memory typically afflicts a healthy man. But it is more a matter of faulty retrieval than of lost information. If an old man and a young man each try to memorize a list of words and are given clues to each of the words, the older man recalls them as well as the younger man. But without clues, the older man has a tougher time:

Age 20: 14 of 24 words recalled.

Age 30: 13 words recalled.

Age 40: 11 words recalled.

Age 50: 10 words recalled.

Age 60: nine words recalled

Age 70: seven words recalled.

Our doctors like to do homework.

In fact they like it so much, they created a housecall medical service designed especially for it. Doctors Home Care. And it brings professional medical care to the homes of people who can't get out of the house to see the doctor.

Like elderly, homebound patients with a continuing illness. For them, their home becomes the doctor's office. Or patients with a temporary illness, who find it difficult to see the doctor. Doctors Home Care provides service for them as long as needed.

Arranging a visit by a Doctors Home Care doctor is as easy as picking up the phone. Our doctor will do a complete history, thorough examination, discuss your condition and prescribe medication as needed. If you need tests, our doctors will perform them right there at your home. And if it can't be done at home, like X-rays for example, special arrangements will be made. Then, further visits to your home will be scheduled.

All Doctors Home Care doctors are experts in internal medicine or family practice. And their years of experience have shown that an ongoing relationship between patient and doctor is essential to the healing process.

That's why when you call Doctors Home Care, our doctor will gladly become your personal physician for all of your present, future and emergency health needs.

If you or someone you know would like more information, call us at the number below.

We realize how important qualified medical care is for those patients who are unable to get to the doctor's office.

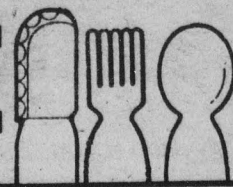

That's why we wouldn't be doing homework unless we were sure we could make the grade.

Acacia Winery focuses on "Bergundians"

By Dan Berger
Copley News Service

When Jerry Goldstein and Mike Richmond decided in the mid-1970s to open the Acacia Winery and dedicate it to the Burgundian varieties of grapes, they were making things hard on themselves.

The Burgundian varieties are Pinot Noir and Chardonnay, and the latter is an "easy sell" in the business of wine. Chardonnay is the premium white table wine grape variety, and Acacia has gained a reputation for fine ones.

But it's the Pinot Noir that can give wine makers headaches.

The reason is its heritage. The finest of Pinot Noir, and some say the finest red wine in the world, is made in the heart of Burgundy in France.

When well made, a fine French red Burgundy can be glorious. It can be light in color yet deep in flavor, or it can be dark in color yet supple and delicate in flavor. It has the ability to charm, seduce and win over any wine drinker, expert or novice.

And it has been said that California cannot duplicate fine French red Burgundy. There are various reasons given — improper soil, wrong clone, weather that's too warm, etc. — but it had been a truism not to be challenged.

There have been successes, no question about it. Notably, Pinot Noirs from Chalone, Hanzell, Carneros Creek, and more recently David Bruce, Calera, Robert Mondavi and Edna Valley have emulated the best of France, and have put Pinot Noir back into the category of "worth trying to do."

Acacia under Goldstein and Richmond chose a unique concept when delving into Pinot Noir. Instead of blending various lots of grapes as did all the other great ones, they chose to keep separate the grapes from all the different vineyards they were buying from, and to bottle them separately, with different vineyard names on the labels.

The reasoning was that, over the years, the consumer (and the wine maker, of course) could see what happens to the wine from each vineyard as the wines age.

At present, Acacia makes five Pinot Noirs, designed by the names of the vineyards —

Lee, Lund, Madonna, St. Clair and Winery Lake. Richmond and Goldstein may add one to the mix. It is a sort of experimental 20-acre block of Pinot Noir on Las Amigas Road in the Carneros region of Napa.

All the new Acacia Pinot Noirs from the 1982 vintage are excellent wines, and my preference was for the Lund, from Mason Lund's dry-farmed ranch, which has a cinnamon and pepper sort of spice and rich fruit flavors. The wine will age well for many years.

My second favorite was a far more delicate wine, designated Lee. Ira Lee's grapes usually produce lighter styled wines, and this one is far more cherrylike and fruity than the others. A faster-maturing wine, I prefer it for near-term drinking.

Also excellent was the St. Clair, which had the highest acidity of all and will certainly take plenty of aging. Jim St. Clair's cool vineyard usually yields wines of this complexity, but this year's version, with an intense pitch-and-pepper depth, is most intriguing.

The Madonna, from Bucky Bartolucci's dry-farmed vineyard, has always given a curious wine, somewhat French-like in style, yet with slight plummy tones. This is no different, with a bonus coming from a slight chocolateyness in the mouth.

The final wine, from Rene diRosa's Winery Lake Vineyard, is also good wine and well made, but a slight grapeyness detracts from the otherwise excellent balance.

Music Center celebrates 20 years with displays

In celebration of the Music Center of Los Angeles County's 20th Anniversary, The Music Center Operating Company has produced colorful, hand-painted, watercolor posters which can be seen on the Plaza of the complex and will soon be posted on billboards throughout the County.

In the lobby of the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion is a small collection of vintage photos and memorabilia commemorating the Center's opening on Dec. 6. The posters and display will be on view throughout the year.

On Thursday, Dec. 6, the Opening Company will invite the community to share in all-day festivities, climaxing with a special event at sundown. Later that evening, regularly scheduled performances will take place in the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion and the Mark Taper Forum.

These are only a few of the events and attractions to be presented by the various companies at the Music Center in honor of the occasion.

Auxiliary home tour tickets available

The San Antonio Community Hospital Auxiliary Christmas Home Tour will be held Dec. 3, from noon to 8 p.m.

After touring some of the most outstanding homes in Upland, participants will be invited to come to the Red Hill Country Club for a Wassail Party and boutique.

Tickets may be purchased at the Bookworm, 229 N. Second Ave., Upland or contacting the hospital's public relations department at 985-2811, extension 2162.

Tickets are $9 if purchased prior to the event or $10 on the day of the event.

Life in the "C Zone" healthier

"We have found that more than 90 percent of the people who experience stress in a certain activity or job have previously done well with it in the past," Kriegel said. "This is not thinking positively. Thinking positively is like putting on a clean shirt when you really need a shower. This is thinking realistically."

• Start your day with a win, something you like to do. "Don't go to a meeting that will drag you down. Make a phone call to someone you like. Perform a little task you'll feel good about. Being in the C zone is contagious. Doing something you feel good about will give you enthusiasm for the next job, which won't seem so hard, even if it is a drain."

• Take a five- to 10-minute break when you feel yourself getting tired. Do something physical that gives you more energy, like breathing deeply, walking up and down a few flights of stairs, or doing the half of a jumping jack with your arms.

According to Kriegel, C zone people automatically take mini-breaks like this to restore their concentration. "One guy will practice putting in his office for five minutes. Another will shoot darts," Kriegel said. "You've got to rest that mental muscle."

No, being in the C zone doesn't mean pushing yourself relentlessly day after day, hour after hour. The Kriegels are believers in the necessity of taking time to rest.

What it does mean is that performing up to your abilities is simply more fun. "When you're performing at your best, you're having a great time," Kriegel said.

Dad's role is not what it used to be

It maintains a crucial part of the socialization of children in that they learn to accept restraints on their behavior, and it is the father who is most likely to impose those restraints.

In early years, male and female children tend to develop a dependency on Mother. Later, the father is more of an influence, which allows the children to grow up and prepares them to leave the nest and accept responsibility as adults. If a son is to accept his normal masculine personality, he must become firmly fixed in his masculine identity in his early years. One has to read just a little in literature dealing with juvenile delinquency to find the constant factor of a broken marriage or absent father as an element.

Dr. Merriweather of Drew University has pointed out in his studies that in male children, parental absence has been found to be associated with strong preference for immediate gratification, lack of social responsibility, inaccurate time perception, plus a variety of intellectual deficits and differences in interpreting relationships.

The most common factor is highly aggressive behavior and a lack of trust in adult males. In short, it tends to cause anti-social behavior problems. The professor's conclusion is that in divorce cases, when circumstances are balanced, sons should stay with their fathers.

The role of father is in so much difficulty that this may be one area for sociological help in re-establishing a role and identity for the American male parent, and a major responsibility of the mass media to recast dads in some other role than the in-resident clown.

Hearing Tests Set For Senior Citizens

Free electronic hearing tests will be given at the Beltone Hearing Aid Center Office at 608 N. Euclid, Ontario on Mondays & Tuesday from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Anyone who has trouble hearing is welcome to have the test. Many people with hearing problems don't need hearing aids. But only a modern hearing test like the one now being offered by Beltone can really tell for sure. Licensed Hearing aid Dispensers will conduct the tests.

Everyone should have a hearing test at least once a year if there is any trouble at all hearing clearly. Even people now wearing a hearing aid or those who have been told nothing could be done for them should have a hearing test to see if modern methods of hearing amplification can help them hear better. Hearing aids will be available for purchase.

Hearing is a family matter so please bring your husband or wife with you if possible.

The free hearing tests will be given Monday and Tuesday from 9:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. To avoid waiting call 984-2248 for an appointment. If you can't get there on Monday or Tuesday, call to arrange for an appointment at another time. In-home testing is also available. Please call to avoid waiting.

PHOTO TIPS

By Holt Confer
Copley News Service

If you've read this column for any length of time, you know I've been using Olympus cameras for quite awhile — they've served me well over the years. Truthfully, I really couldn't find much fault with the OM-1's and the Zuiko lenses I've carried back and forth across the country.

While I've had no problems with my Olympus equipment, I can't say the same for the Olympus marketing people. Let me explain.

Reports on the American popularity of various makes of cameras generally have shown Olympus equipment several notches from the top (Minolta historically has been No. 1), even though the company has been a consistent leader in developing photographic technology.

One of the ways camera companies make their equipment more appealing to prospective users is by working closely with photography writers. Even though the writers may not like everything they try, usually the criticism is constructive and the "pros" outweigh the "cons."

When I first began writing this column almost four years ago, I was an ardent Olympus booster, the marketing people were cooperative, allowing me to consign (and occasionally purchase) items of equipment that I found useful and that I felt my readers also might be interested in using.

Suddenly, after about a year and a half of cooperation, all that stopped — and I never was able to determine just what reasoning led to that decision. In fact, for a long time, I wasn't even on the Olympus mailing list.

For an independent columnist like myself, I feel it's important to maintain a good working relationship with the various equipment manufacturers. It's really the only way I can keep all of you up to date on products and services that appear to be worthwhile additions to your photography.

Over the years, I've been able to develop a good rapport with many folk — Vivitar, Kodak, Fuji, Konico, Tamron and, of course, the Minolta people along with their fine line of Cokin filters, plus a few more — for example, I currently have a Hasselblad on consignment.

Now I seldom delve into the pure engineering behind a product. What I try to do is convey whether or not a product is — to borrow a phrase from the computer people — user-friendly. And for most of my audience, I suspect, ease of use motivates more sales than technical formula.

But lately, I've begun to notice a change in the attitude at Olympus. For one thing, I'm back on the mailing list (just as mysteriously as I'd been banished), and I hope lots of other photo writers are enjoying a similar experience. For another thing, I've recently received several really class publications extolling Olympus products and services.

The Olympus Pursuit is a quarterly newsletter for Olympus people worldwide — this issue was a dozen pages of new information about Olympus products printed on quality paper stock and filled with four-color photography — certainly not your typical drab newsletter.

The second publication was even more impressive. Titled "Vision Age," it explores the spot metering technology of the OM-4; looks at Kon Sasaki's macrophotography; provides a primer on sports photography, and discusses the history of Zuiko optics. This is one of those spare-no-expense publications and the quality is evident right from the beginning. The choice Olympus management made to go this route seems appropriate — the whole thing is informative, colorful and interesting, a piece that should appeal to Olympus owners and keep them excited about the firm who makes their equipment.

I have not yet had the opportunity to try the new OM-4 that's been the subject of so many of the recent Olympus ads. Perhaps one of these days, an OM-4 will come along, and then I'll be able to let you know how I feel about that development.

I must confess, though, I'm still using my OM-1's, the first of the modern Olympus cameras — units that I bought pretty close to 10 years ago. One of these days, I suppose I'll update what I have, but so far I haven't really found a good reason — "don't fix it if it ain't broke" is probably as close as I can come to logical reasoning for still being an OM-1 person.

Scholarship applications available now

Applications for two $500 scholarships for women majoring in the field of liberal arts are being accepted by Delta Theta Chi sorority, a national, non-collegiate cultural sorority.

Requirements call for a high scholastic average and evidence of financial need. These scholarships are awarded annually to women of promise and distinction.

Q. My parents recently gave our children an 11-year-old quarter horse. It appears that it is difficult for the horse to eat — he eats very slowly and slobbers excessively.

Unfortunately, the horse has had very little attention during the last few years. Is this behavior normal for horses of this age? If not, what is causing the problem and what should we do about it?

A. Excessive slobbering while eating is not normal for horses. High on the list of likely causes for this behavior is sharp teeth.

During its lifetime each horse has two sets of teeth, the temporary, or deciduous, set (milk teeth) and the permanent set.

The temporary teeth start erupting through the gums during the first week after birth. The permanent teeth start replacing the temporary teeth at about 2½ years of age. All of the horse's permanent teeth should be erupted or visible by 4 or 5 years of age.

The horse uses the incisors (front) teeth to cut grasses while grazing on pasture. The molars or cheek teeth are used for grinding or masticating the grass or grain prior to swallowing and further digestion. The action of chewing in the horse is an up-and-down one as well as a side-to-side one.

The horse's head tapers or narrows from the top to the bottom. Therefore the upper jaw is wider than the lower jaw and the molars do not meet evenly. The outer edge of the upper teeth protrudes outward beyond the lower teeth and the inside edge of the lower molars extends inside the upper ones.

Because of the shape of the horse's head and the placement of the teeth, the outer edge of the upper teeth and the inside edge of the lower cheek teeth are not subject to wear. This results in the outside borders of the upper molars and the inside borders of the lower molars being ground to razor-sharp edges.

Often the sharp edges on the upper molars lacerate or cut the inside of the cheeks and the sharp edges on the lower molars lacerate the tongue. This makes the cheeks and tongue very sore. Horses with this problem often refuse to eat or eat very slowly. Excessive salivation or even blood may be noticed around the lips.

Many horses with this problem "quid" their food — this simply means dropping from the mouth food that has been partially chewed.

Lack of response to the bit or throwing the head is often seen in horses with sore mouths. If severe enough, horses with sharp teeth lose condition and weight.

Your veterinarian can rasp or "float" the sharp projections off the molar teeth of your horse. A large metal file called a float is used for this procedure and it usually causes the horse very little discomfort. If the horse is extremely nervous, some tranquilization may be required. Your horse's teeth should be examined once every four months for sharp projections.

Of course, without actually seeing your horse it is impossible to tell you precisely what is causing the excessive slobbering. You should have your local veterinarian examine your horse very soon. It would also be advisable to have your veterinarian give your horse its routine yearly immunization and annual physical examination at this time.

A healthy, happy horse makes a much more enjoyable pet and

Dart Shoot will raise money for Special Olympics

The second annual Special Olympics Dart Shoot, sponsored by the Claremont Ice Company and the Pomona Eagles Lodge, will be held on Sunday at noon at 954 W. Mission Blvd., Pomona.

Events will include men's singles, mixed doubles and blind draw doubles.

The shoot will benefit the Western San Bernardino Special Olympics which includes athletes from Ontario, Upland, Rancho Cucamonga, Fontana, Guasti, Bloomington, Rialto and Grand Terrace.

"Our goal this year is to send 30 athletes to the Special Olympics," said Todd Fraley, owner of the Claremont Ice Company.

Money raised at last year's shoot enabled supporters to send seven athletes through the area and state Special Olympic games. "Considering it was our first effort, we still were able to collect almost $1,100," Fraley said.

Dart shoot participants pay one fee which includes admission, contest entry application, food, drawings and other prizes.

"One thing that we're very proud of is that every single penny that is received due to this tournament goes to the Special Olympics," Fraley said. He is also a head trustee and dart chairman for the Eagles.

"The Claremont Ice Company will pick up the tab for all operating costs and overhead, while the Pomona Eagles will supply the facilities and a pledge of $500," he said.

Fraley said many people from the private and business sectors, including the "Budweiser people at Foothill Beverage Corporation," have offered their support.

Any club, bar, lodge or organization wishing to sponsor an athlete can call Fraley at the Claremont Ice Company, (714) 626-6860. Participation is open to anyone. □ companion than a worn-out neglected horse.

Q. Our 6-year-old dalmatian recently came home smelling like a skunk! Our neighbors all had different opinions regarding what to use to rid the dog of the smell.

Since the dog is very affectionate and usually sleeps on a sun porch next to the kitchen, we are quite anxious to get rid of the awful odor. Do you have any suggestions?

A. There is no perfect solution to the problem of the odor on dogs resulting from meeting with skunks.

Probably the best method of getting rid of the offending odor is to bathe the dog in tomato juice. This should be followed by a thorough washing with dog shampoo and rinsing with water. It has been suggested that all of this should be followed by a washing with a 5 percent solution of ammonia.

These three washings will not rid your dog of all of the odor, but will make him an acceptable member of the family.

If there is an indication that the skunk's spray is bothering the dog's eyes, you should obtain an eye flush and eye ointment from your veterinarian.

Q. Our 8-year-old Labrador retriever has had a sore on his left leg for a long time. He licks at it constantly. The sore and hair around it are always moist. He does not seem to have any other problems.

I have tried various ointments, but none seems to help. What should I do about my dog's problem?

A. Your dog most likely has a lick granuloma, commonly called a "lick sore" or "boredom sore."

These sores develop most often in large breed dogs with short hair coats (Doberman pinschers, Great Danes, Labrador retrievers, etc.) 5 years of age or older.

Dogs left alone for long periods of time or without something to interest them will often begin to lick their wrists and ankles continuously. Initially the hair is rubbed off. Then the skin becomes reddened and shiny. Usually by this time the area itches and the licking is intensified. Eventually the sore becomes hard, thick and insensitive to pressure. Usually the dog keeps the area clean by constantly licking.

There are several methods of treatment for lick sores. The simplest method is an ointment containing a corticosteroid. The ointment has to be applied several times a day.

Unfortunately the dog may lick the drug off the sore very quickly. The licking habit may be broken by diverting the dog's attention. For example, the dog's environment may be changed. More exercise, human companionship, or another canine playmate may be helpful.

Non-responding sores may require injections of corticosteroids or surgical removal of the sores. X-ray therapy has also been shown to be beneficial in some cases.

Q. The teeth of our 8-year-old Labrador retriever are becoming yellowed and quite unsightly. Is there anything we can do to restore the teeth's normal color and prevent further discoloration?

A. Discolored teeth are usually caused by the deposition of a soft deposit called plaque which forms on the enamel surface of the teeth.

Plaque usually forms at the gum margin and is produced by the combined action of bacteria, saliva, putrefying foodstuffs and digestive enzymes.

Once plaque is established, mineral salts are deposited on it from saliva producing calculus or tartar. The longer the condition is left untreated, the thicker the tartar becomes. The most common cause of bad breath in dogs is the accumulation of plaque and tartar. Plaque and tartar also lead to separation of the teeth from the gums and eventual tooth decay.

Although very important to the health of the dog, routine teeth care is often overlooked by most owners. Most teeth and mouth disorders can be prevented by yearly prophylactic dental cleaning.

Regular cleaning of the teeth with toothpaste, powder, mouthwash or antiseptic gel will help prevent tooth disease.

Another tough task ahead for Scots in playoffs

By Dennis Arp

Upland High School football coach Leo Guest knew the task wouldn't be an easy one. To beat Blair in the first round of the CIF playoffs, Upland would have to contain some of the quickest backs in the Eastern Conference.

But for three quarters, the Highlanders shut down the Vikings' wishbone attack and found themselves relaxing behind the comfort zone of a 15-0 lead.

Maybe that was the problem. Maybe Upland relaxed too much. Guest said it was more a case of Blair's quickness taking its toll.

Whatever the reason, Blair rallied with three fourth-quarter touchdowns and the Highlanders ended up hanging on by their fingernails to a 22-21 victory at South Pasadena High School.

The win was a mild upset of the Rio Hondo League champions and advanced Upland (8-2-1) to the second round of the playoffs; the Scots host Norco Friday at Highlander Stadium.

Upland's season is still alive, a point that makes all others incidental in the survival game called the playoffs. But the Scots could have saved themselves a lot of grief had their impressive defense lasted 12 more minutes.

"We stopped tackling in the fourth quarter and they came back to give us a scare," said Guest, who picked up his first playoff victory in three years at Upland. "We always have to make it hard on ourselves."

And things get harder this week. Norco (9-2) comes into Friday's test with a five-game winning streak, including a first-round 27-7 win over El Rancho.

The Cougars, who are seeded fourth in the Eastern Conference tournament, feature a run-oriented offense and an unyielding defense.

Norco began the season with a shocking 7-6 triumph over Riverside Poly, a squad that went on to win the Citrus Belt League title. The win got the attention of future opponents.

In their first season in the Ivy League, the Cougars' only loss was 12-7 to Arlington, the eventual league champion. Eisenhower handed Norco its lone non-league defeat, 10-6.

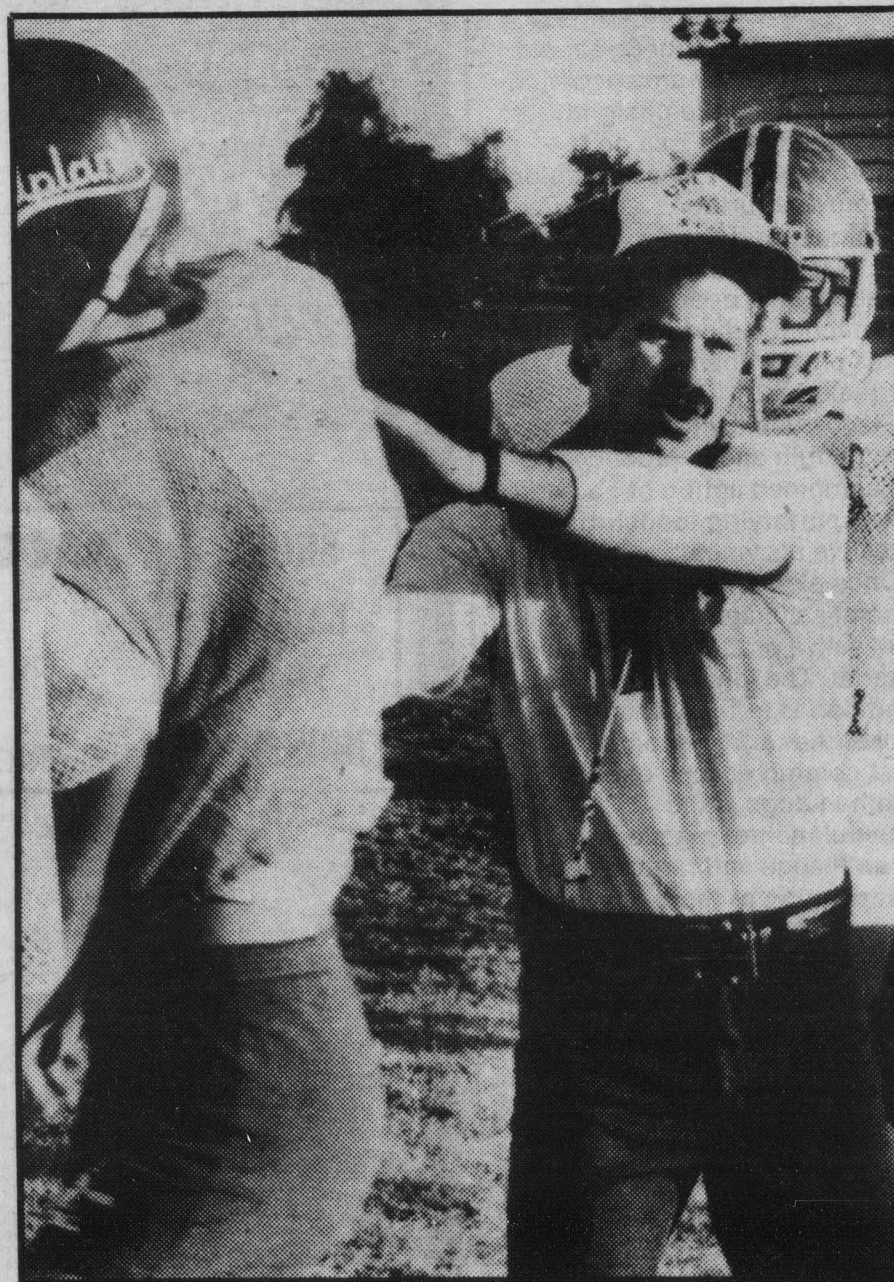

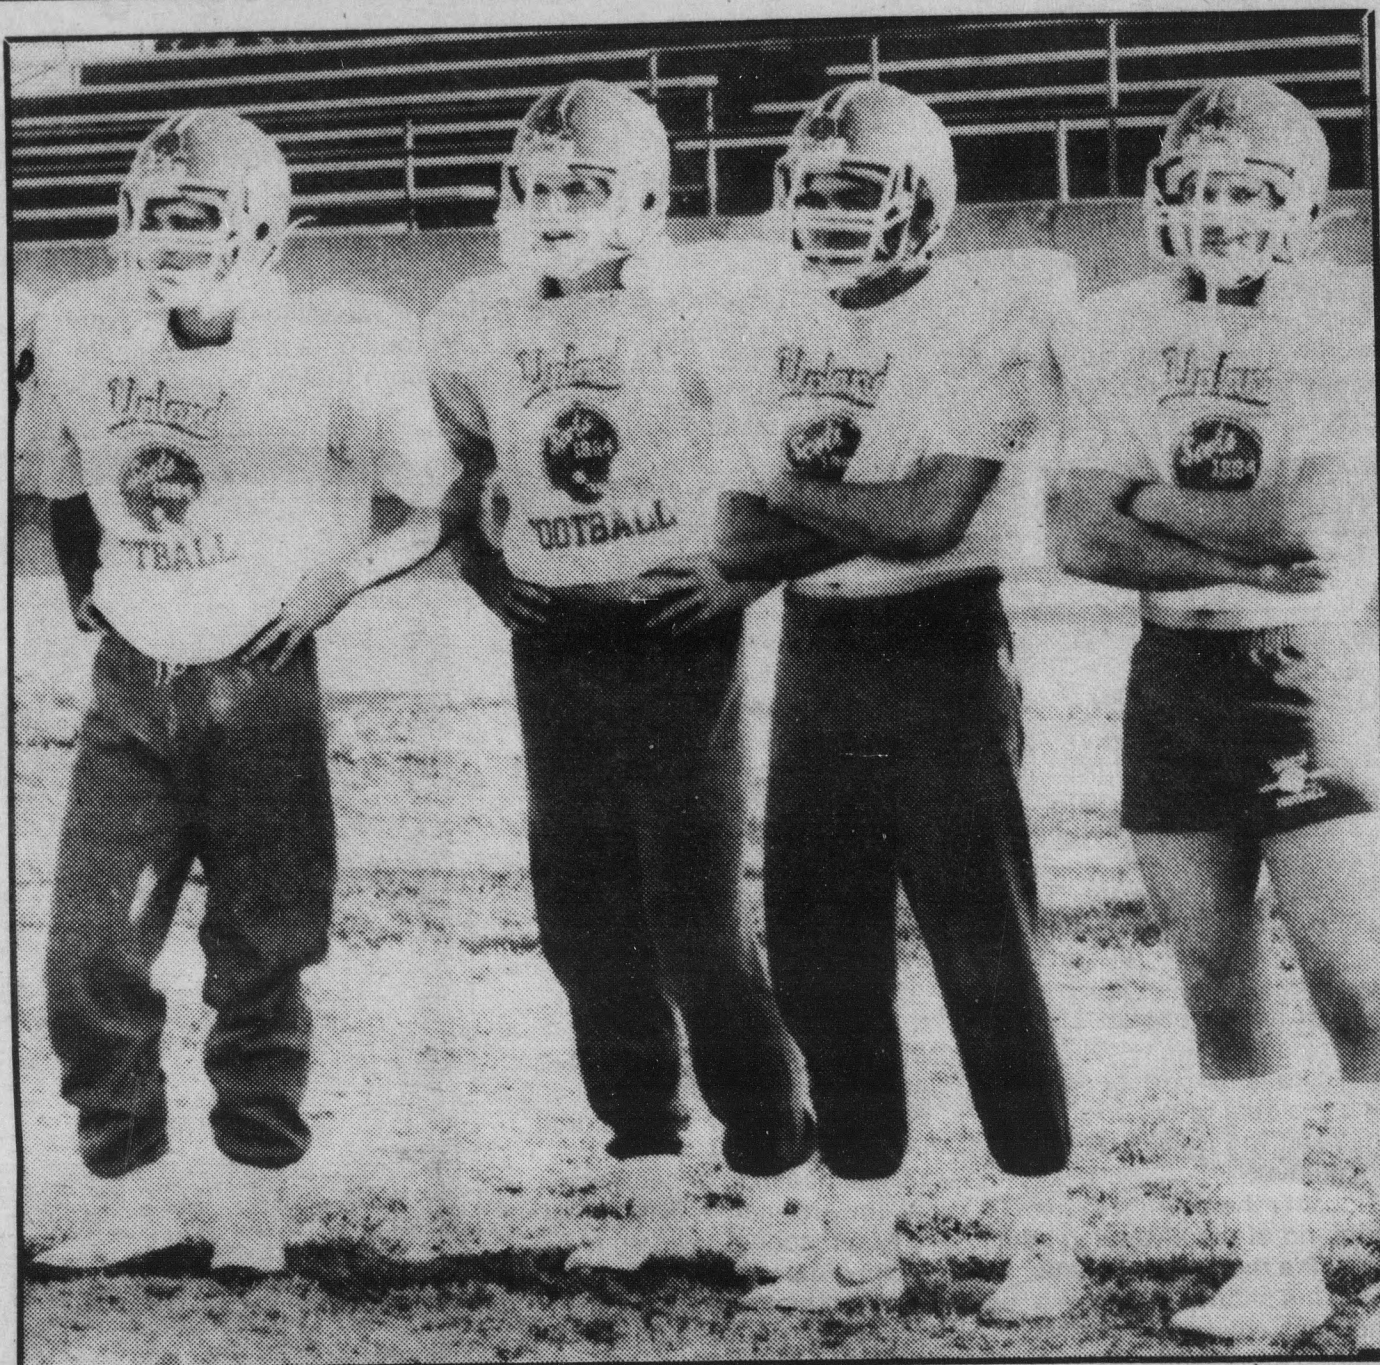

There's little doubt that Norco has won with defense. No team has scored more than one touchdown on the Cougars, who have allowed just 54 points in 11 games. They have four shutouts, including a 29-0 blanking of North, a team that forfeited to Upland but defeated the Highlanders 13-8 on the field.

The Cougars had five defensive players named first-team, all-Ivy League: linebacker David Mundt (6-1, 210), who was defensive player of the year, linebacker Greg Schulz (6-2, 220), nose guard Mike Ramil (6-8, 240), defensive end Darren Roth and safety Curtis Showalter.

Norco forced El Rancho into five turnovers, including a 21-yard interception return for touchdown by Mike Yoakum.

On offense, the Cougars run a veer option attack. Guest thinks the game will match strength against strength.

"The best aspect of our team is our ability to defense the run and the best thing they do on offense is run," he said. "I think it'll be a defensive battle."

Offensive linemen everywhere strive for some type of recognition. Much like their Washington Redskins counterparts, the Upland offensive line has literally acquired the "Hogs" label (top), with red stickers on their helmets.

For the defensive group, "sticking" is the name of game and assistant coach Paul Labarrere (left) gives his charges instructions on the upcoming game against Norco.

Filippi awarded baseball honor

Jamie Filippi, the most valuable player in the Gulf Coast League last summer, has been named the winner of the coveted Win Clark Award by the Association of Professional Baseball Players of America.

The Clark Award is given annually to "California's finest first-year professional baseball player." The presentation was made at the association's award ceremonies last Friday night at the Grand Hotel in Anaheim.

Past winners of the award include ex-Dodger great Willie Davis, Tim Wallach of the Montreal Expos and 1984 National League batting champion Tony Gwynn of the San Diego Padres.

Filippi, a 1980 graduate of Upland High School, won the award for his outstanding season with the Chicago White Sox's farm team in Sarasota, Fla.

According to the Howe News Bureau, league statisticians, Filippi was the league's best pitcher.

In 11 games for the White Sox, he posted a 10-1 record with an earned run average of 0.61, both league-leading marks. In 74 innings of work, he fanned 74 batters while issuing only 19 walks.

The 21-year-old Rancho Cucamonga resident has also been labeled as the "sleeper" of the 1983 winter draft. Following one year at Florida International University, Filippi was a 12th round draft choice by the White Sox.

Prior to his year in Florida, Filippi spent two years at Cochise Community College in Arizona after graduating from Upland.

Somis gymnasts qualify for state

A pair of Class III gymnasts from the Somis School of Gymnastics have qualified for the state meet with their performances last Sunday at the district meet.

Kristin Holliday posted an all around score of 34.7 to advance into the state meet at the junior level. She'll be joined by Brenda Weaver, who had a 34.45 at the meet hosted by the Kips of Fullerton.

Holliday qualified in 14th for the meet and Weaver a spot behind her.

A total of 12 gymnasts from Class IV will participate in the district qualifying meet Dec. 8 at Cal Poly Pomona. Among the qualifiers is Michelle Wilhoit, who's rated second with a score of 33.6 in the senior division.

Junior division qualifiers include Yvette Adams (8th, 33.5),

Marie Bangle (12th, 32.8) and Kelli Deninger (13th, 32.8). Marni Young is the first alternate.

In the children's division, the Somis qualified seven girls. They include Leticia Vargas (5th, 34.7), Roxanne Wilhoit (6th, 34.3), Monique Pantenburg (10th, 33.9), Kelly Schlachter (11th, 33.9), Carol Nye (24th, 32.6), Michelle Matrahazi (26th, 32.4) and Amber Conrad (31st, 31.7).

Nicole Wilson (6th, 30.8) is the lone novice division qualifier. Class III qualifiers for the Cal Poly meet include Gina Layton (45th, 32.3) in the children's division. The seven juniors in the meet will be Weaver (34th, 33.5), Marie Schmidt (37th, 32.8), Holiday (37th, 32.8), Laurie Ransom (43rd, 32.2), Christy Sumner (44th, 32.1), Trisa Switzer (48th, 32.0) and Kristen Lott (51st, 31.5).

Flag football program

Upland's entry in the Boys and Girls Club flag football league has completed the first round of play with a 1-2 record, thanks to outstanding performances by John Herrera and Kelly Vicente.

The Inland Empire League is composed of teams from Corona (undefeated league leader), Upland, Del Norte Elementary School (Ontario) and Monte Vista (Montclair) which will play a three-round schedule.

"It's strictly an informal, participation type thing," said Jim Robinson, program director. "Of course the kids play to win, but the injury factor is way down."

Because of that, girls are welcome to play. At the moment, Vicente, a sixth grader, is the only girl playing. A total of six girls played last season.

Participants are club members in the fifth, sixth and seventh grade. Robinson said the Upland club, located at Upland Elementary School (Fifth and Arrow), is still adding players to the roster.

Upland will seek to improve its record in the next two rounds. The next game for Upland is a road test at Del Norte on Nov. 30.

Ken Spencer is the Upland coach.

Sage, the great stuffing seasoner, is equally at home in the Hearty Turkey Soup with vegetables, mushrooms and barley.

It's a sage story for holiday turkeys

Sage, the savory keynote in traditional holiday stuffings, has an affinity for turkey that doesn't stop at the dressing.

It also adds zest to a fully flavored, soul-warming soup made from leftover turkey, as well as a baked turkey casserole.

The Hearty Turkey Soup is full of goodness: mushrooms, barley, carrots, celery, zucchini plus turkey all appropriately seasoned with sage and instant minced onion. The soup only takes about 45 minutes, including preparation time.

The second recipe is a light but satisfying dish. Turkey Cheese Strata, a custard-textured casserole made with bread slices, eggs and milk plus the turkey and cheese. Any cheese is fine: mozzarella, Monterey Jack or Muenster, or even Cheddar.

Hearty Turkey Soup

2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 cups sliced fresh mushrooms
8 cups chicken broth
1/3 cup barley (uncooked)
1/4 cup instant minced onion
1 teaspoon whole or rubbed sage leaves, crushed
1/16 teaspoon ground black pepper
1 1/2 cups each sliced carrots and celery
1 1/2 cups zucchini in 1/2 x 1/4-inch lengths
1 cup diced tomato (optional)
2 cups cooked turkey or chicken in bite-sized pieces.
In a medium saucepan heat oil until hot. Add mushrooms. Saute until golden, about 5 minutes. Add chicken broth, barley, onion, sage and black pepper. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, until barley is almost cooked, about 20 minutes. Add carrots, celery, zucchini and tomato. Simmer, covered, for 3 minutes. Add turkey. Simmer, covered, covered until barley and vegetables are tender, about 2 minutes.

Yield: 6 to 8 portions (about 12 cups)

Turkey Cheese Strata

1/4 cup instant minced onion
1/4 cup water
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
8 slices firm-textured white bread
1 cup cooked turkey or chicken in bite-sized pieces
1/2 cup shredded mozzarella or Monterey Jack cheese
3 eggs
2 cups milk
3/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon whole or rubbed sage leaves, crushed
1/16 teaspoon ground black pepper

Combine onion and water; set aside for 10 minutes. In a large skillet, melt butter. Add onion; saute for 2 minutes; set aside. Remove crusts from bread (use crusts to make crumbs if desired). Cut bread slices in half diagonally. In the bottom of a greased 10-inch quiche or pie pan or 1 1/2 quart shallow casserole arrange 6 of the bread halves. Sprinkle with turkey, cheese and reserved onion. Arrange remaining bread halves on top of the onion layer allowing the halves to overlap. In a medium bowl beat eggs. Add milk, salt, sage and black pepper; mix well. Pour evenly over bread. Cover and refrigerate at least 1 hour or overnight. Preheat oven to 350 F. Bake, uncovered, until a knife inserted in the center comes out clean, about 45 minutes.

Yield: 6 portions

How not to kill your family at Thanksgiving dinner

Your Thanksgiving feast may lead to an unpleasant episode of food poisoning if holiday foods aren't handled, prepared, and stored correctly, warns the American Council on Science and Health (ACSH), an independent scientific organization.

"Several of the foods commonly served at Thanksgiving, including poultry, stuffing, and pies, are common culprits in food poisoning outbreaks," said ACSH Research Associate Kathleen A. Meister.

"Any perishable food can cause food poisoning if bacteria are allowed to grow in it. The keys to preventing food poisoning are to keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold, and to handle foods in a sanitary manner. There are also some special precautions that you should take with the foods served at your Thanksgiving dinner, especially turkey and stuffing," she said.

ACSH offers the following tips for the safe handling of Thanksgiving foods:

✓ Don't stuff your turkey the night before. If you want to prepare the stuffing the night before, that's okay, but store it separately in the refrigerator, and stuff the turkey just before you put it into the oven.

✓ Don't pack or jam stuffing into a turkey tightly. If you put the stuffing in loosely, it will allow heat to penetrate and cook the stuffing thoroughly. If you want more stuffing than will fit in your bird, you can always cook it separately.

✓ After the turkey is in the oven, wash all the utensils that you used thoroughly before using them to prepare other foods.

✓ Make sure that your turkey is cooked properly by following recipe instructions carefully. Remember that the roasting time is different for turkeys of different sizes.

✓ Make sure that your stuffing reaches a temperature of at least 165 degrees Fahrenheit during roasting. You can check this by inserting a meat thermometer into the stuffing for five minutes.

✓ It is not safe to cook a turkey partially one day and then complete the cooking the next day.

✓ If your Thanksgiving menu includes a cream, custard, or meringue-topped pie, store it in the refrigerator until you're ready to serve it. These pies are perishable, so they should not be allowed to stand out at room temperature.

✓ Refrigerate leftovers promptly after dinner.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the City Council of the City of Upland will hold a public hearing on Monday, December 3, 1984, at 7:00 p.m., in the Council Chambers of the Upland City Hall, 460 North Euclid Avenue, Upland, California 91786, to consider the following item:

CONDITIONAL USE PERMIT NO. CUP 84 10/EAR EXEMPT: An appeal by Craig H. Smyser of the Planning Commission's approval of a request to allow a proposed TENNIS COURT ENCLOSURE FENCE to exceed the maximum height within five (5) ft. of side and rear property lines (maximum height of six (6) ft. permitted; ten ft. proposed, adjacent to north and east property lines), in an RS 20 (Single family Residential - 20,000 sq. ft. min. lot area/DU) Zone, on property legally described as: Lot 30, Tract 9481 in the City of Upland, County of San Bernardino, State of California, as per map recorded in Book 137, Pages 1, 2, and 3 of Maps in the Office of the County Recorder of said County.

More generally described as 2218 North First Avenue: A rectangularly shaped area of approximately 19,000 sq. ft., having a frontage of about 86 ft. on the east side of First Avenue, with a maximum depth of about 220.9 ft.; the south property line of said area being located about 219 ft. north of the centerline of 22nd Street.

This public hearing will be conducted pursuant to the provisions of Part IV Zoning Regulations, and Part V Subdivision Regulations, Article IX of the Upland Municipal Code and Section 65500-65800 of the Government Code and Section 66451.3 of the Subdivision Map Act of the State of California. All maps, environmental findings and other data pertinent to this proposal may be inspected at the office of the City Clerk prior to the public hearing. All persons interested are invited to attend said hearing and express their opinion for or against the proposed proposal.

DOREEN K. CARPENTER, CMC
CITY CLERK

LESS YOU TAKE ACTION TO PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY, IT MAY BE SOLD AT A PUBLIC SALE. IF YOU NEED AN EXPLANATION OF THE NATURE OF THE PROCEEDING AGAINST YOU, YOU SHOULD CONTACT A LAWYER.

On December 13, 1984, at 9:00 A.M., CALIFORNIA MORTGAGE SERVICE as duly appointed Trustee under and pursuant to Deed of Trust recorded 2-16-79, as inst. No. 657; in book 9624, page 1185, of Official Records in the office of the County Recorder of SAN BERNARDINO County, State of CALIFORNIA, Executed by SALVADOR R. LOPEZ AND NORMA LOPEZ, HUSBAND AND WIFE, WILL SELL AT PUBLIC AUCTION TO HIGHEST BIDDER FOR CASH OR CASHIER'S CHECK (payable at time of sale in lawful money of the United States) (CASHIER'S CHECK PAYABLE TO CALWIDE TRUST DEED SERVICES, INC.) at the front entrance to the Chino City Hall at 13220 Central Avenue, Chino, California, all right, title and interest conveyed to and now held by it under said Deed of Trust in the property situated in said County and State described as:

LOT 2, TRACT NO. 3639, IN THE CITY OF UPLAND, COUNTY OF SAN BERNARDINO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA, AS PER MAP RECORDED IN BOOK 48, PAGE 14 AND 15 OF MAPS, IN THE OFFICE OF THE COUNTY RECORDER OF SAID COUNTY.

The street address and other common designation, if any, of the real property described above is purported to be: 245 W. SEVENTH STREET, UPLAND, CALIFORNIA.

The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address and other common designation, if any, shown herein.

Said sale will be made, but without covenant or warranty, express or implied, regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to pay the remaining principal sum of the note(s) secured by said Deed of Trust, with interest thereon, as provided in said note(s), advances, if any, under the terms of said Deed of Trust, fees, charges and expenses of the Trustee and of the trusts created by said Deed of Trust.

The total amount of the unpaid balance of the obligation secured by the property to be sold and reasonable estimated costs, expenses and advances at the time of the initial publication of the Notice of Sale is $67,401.01.

The beneficiary under said Deed of Trust heretofore executed and delivered to the undersigned a written Declaration of Default and Demand for Sale, and a written Notice of Default and Election to Sell. The undersigned caused said Notice of Default and Election to Sell to be recorded in the county where the real property is located.

Date: November 2, 1984.
